Stud agreement

01 / Parties & identification

Complete together before any service. This is a blank agreement template between the parties named below. Canine Scanning supplies the template only: it is not a party, does not oversee the agreement and does not verify the information entered.

This is not legal advice or a guarantee of enforceability. Obtain independent advice where needed, especially for commercial, cross-border or puppy-in-lieu arrangements. Complete every relevant box; write “not applicable” where appropriate. Both parties should keep the same signed copy and attachments.

Microchip number

Registration number / registry (if any)

Each party confirms their authority to enter this agreement and agrees to disclose relevant health, temperament, reproductive history, inherited risks and registration restrictions known to them. Record evidence for both dogs; a DNA result, registration or semen assessment alone is not comprehensive welfare clearance.

Health screening / veterinary advice: test, dog, date, result and attached evidence

Relevant conditions, medication, previous litters, temperament or other concerns

Biosecurity / infection screening agreed with the appropriate professional

Do not proceed while relevant concerns remain unresolved. Seek appropriate veterinary advice about the suitability of both dogs and the pairing. Welfare may require postponement, a different pairing or no breeding. No declaration here certifies either dog as disease-free or guarantees healthy puppies.

Service & responsibilities

03 / Agree the practical arrangements

Service method, location, intended dates and number of attempts

Professional / practice responsible for any regulated procedures and advice

Any procedure must be arranged with a professional legally entitled to perform it. This agreement does not authorise a procedure or replace the professional's own consent, assessment or clinical judgement. No party is obliged to proceed if doing so would compromise animal welfare.

If semen is transported: collection, dispatch, receiving contact and agreed timings

Transport, handling, supervision, accommodation and routine care responsibilities

Usual and emergency veterinary practice / telephone; owners' emergency contacts

Who contacts the vet / owner, and how veterinary costs will be agreed and paid

Seek prompt veterinary help for illness, injury or distress; do not delay necessary care while resolving payment or contacting the other party. The treating practice determines consent requirements. This template gives no blanket authority for treatment and excludes no responsibility imposed by law.

Fees & outcomes

04 / Write down the agreement clearly

Total agreed stud/service fee (GBP)

Deposit / advance payment (GBP)

Balance, payment dates and what the fee includes / excludes

Other costs: testing, professional fees, collection, transport or accommodation

Neither pregnancy, litter size, live birth nor puppy health is guaranteed. A lack of pregnancy does not automatically entitle either party to a repeat service. Agree fair arrangements below before payment; any future attempt remains subject to welfare, professional advice and fresh agreement.

If no pregnancy: evidence / notification dates and agreed refund or other remedy

Cancellation / postponement by either party: notice, refund and justified costs

Any optional repeat service: expiry, conditions, costs and welfare review

Do not assume an advance payment is automatically non-refundable. Where consumer law applies, terms must be fair and transparent and cannot remove statutory rights. This template does not waive those rights. Record any additional arrangement in a signed attachment; seek tailored advice before agreeing a puppy instead of money.

Records & signatures

05 / Check, agree & retain a copy

Registration / mating records: documents, responsible person and agreed deadline

Attached documents / additional terms (identify each version and date)

Before signing: both parties should check the dogs' identities, evidence, fees and arrangements. Resolve blank or conflicting terms. Each party confirms that information supplied is accurate to the best of their knowledge and agrees to notify the other of relevant changes before the service.

Changes should be recorded in writing and agreed by both parties. Raise any disagreement promptly using the contact details above; obtain independent advice if it cannot be resolved. Nothing here prevents a party using statutory remedies or the courts. No confidentiality or non-disparagement obligation is imposed.

Keep personal information and copies of evidence secure and use them only for legitimate purposes connected with the agreement or as required by law. This is not a substitute for any privacy information required of a business.
